

I Believe in Infinite Intelligence

When I was I child, I believed in You
Because of simple things.
The warmth of a grandfather's hand,
The smell in my grandmother's kitchen,
The length of a kitten's whisker,
The feel of the grass beneath my feet.

As a mother, I believed in You
Because of the perfect shell of a newborn's ear,
The music of my child's laughter,
The love, overflowing for this being in my care

And now I believe in You
Because of the light I see reflected
In the eyes of a stranger,
The warmth of a lover's kiss,
The peace of finding that single point
Of perfect stillness within myself,
Of knowing that I can give love
Even when in great pain.
I believe in You because You and I are One.

Kathy Bell